"Oftentimes the most difficult thing to do in the short-term is to open your heart to God, to bring yourself to the place of poverty and weakness and dependence on His Son." -- Michael Card October 2, 2011 Verse for the Day: 2 Peter 3:17-18 By Michael Card The apostle Peter exhorts Christians to "be self-controlled and alert. Your enemy the devil prowls around like a roaring lion looking for someone to devour. Resist him, stand firm in the faith, and you will be saved." If we are to be self-controlled and alert, then we must have self-discipline. We must have self-control in order to stay sane and on the path of righteousness. We must have self-discipline in order to become spiritually mature in this world. Self-control and self-discipline is the first step in self-mastery. I recently heard someone say, "Self-discipline is like a muscle. If you don't use it, it atrophies." That is a fact. If you don't use it, it will atrophy. If you don't use it, it will lose its ability to provide for your own needs. You must exercise self-discipline in order to properly manage your own life. To practice self-discipline, you must have self-control. What exactly is self-control? It is basically the exercise of choice. Choosing to have self-discipline will require you to choose to make choices in your life. For instance, you could choose to become angry, withdraw and display your displeasure with others, or you could choose to keep your anger in check and try to exercise self-control in your dealings with others. By choosing self-discipline, you are choosing to control your anger, to control your response, and to control your reaction. Self-discipline is the exercise of your ability to think through an
