V. please advise what happens when a customer calls and is told that the card is no longer available and that they should call back at a different time. What does your company do? I actually wonder why you don't call me back if there is a problem. My number is 519-965-2092 Regards Sharon Hi Sharon, I hope you had a nice day today! I can't answer your question without knowing how often this problem happens, but here's what we usually do: (1) We treat it like any other potential customer call and have a representative call them back. (2) If they tell us it's a brand new account and we're the only ones they have – we call them back and tell them they've got another card in the mail, and that we're sorry the delivery was delayed. (3) If it's an account that has been open for a while and we can't find the account, we just call them back and ask how they got our information. Then we see if we can verify it. If we can't, we apologize for the inconvenience and suggest they do it over the phone or by fax. Good customer service isn't always easy, but it's definitely worth it! Greetings. I'm participating in the 7th annual Art of Social Commerce My new book, THE ART OF SOCIAL COMMERCE, was published in April. It contains 13 graphics (which I will be sharing on my Facebook page, starting Sunday) and the text of my presentation at the Art of Social Commerce conference in April. It's fun to participate in the book and conference, and the graphics are some of my best ever. But I have a question: When I send out cards to prospects, what happens to the ones that don't sell? Do they get recycled or thrown away? It's hard to 2d92ce491b
