If it is from 1 to 3:00 AM I cannot even think, it is necessary to use the computer and I can't use the computer for 30 minutes. And a little after 2:00 or 3:00 AM I can't sleep, I try to use the computer but I fell asleep, so I cannot use it.. "Sorry, Sally," replied the knight, "I can't accept this." "You'll be free to refuse it if you want," replied the squirrel. "The only requirement is that you don't leave the castle until you find out what I can tell you." "But I can't do that," replied Sir William. "Actually, you can," replied Sally. "This castle has a secret exit that the nobles use to escape when the goblins attack." "Can you show me where it is?" asked Sir William. "Certainly," replied Sally. "Follow me." Sally led Sir William to the secret exit and after she had told him the way he left the castle. "I'll get a good night's sleep now," he said as he left the castle. Sally continued to sleep for another two days. She was about to begin a third day when she heard the sound of someone knocking at the door. Thinking it was the same nobleman that had come before she went to her bed and curled up to go to sleep. "Who is it?" she asked as she got up and looked out of the window. "It's Sir William," replied the voice. "I'm here to free you and rescue you from the goblin's castle." "Thank you," replied Sally. "Let me put something on." "No," replied Sir William. "You are free to leave any time you wish." "I don't want to leave," said Sally. "I'm free and I want to stay with you." "All right," said Sir William. "I'll find some food." "No," replied Sally. "I can eat anything." Sir William laughed. "Then I'm going to find you something to eat." "Where do you want to go?" asked Sally. "I want to go to my castle," replied Sir William. "I think you'll like it there." "I'll go with you," replied Sally. When Sir William arrived
