Ca<sup>2+</sup>/calmodulin-dependent protein kinase kinase in rat liver and peripheral blood leukocytes].
The aim of the present study was to obtain additional information about the role and function of Ca<sup>2+</sup>/calmodulin-dependent protein kinase kinase (CaMKK) in signal transduction and in the regulation of transcription and gene expression. Subcellular localization and function of CaMKK were studied in rat liver and peripheral blood leukocytes by means of immunocytochemistry and biochemical analysis. The results showed that CaMKK was localized in nucleus as well as in the cytoplasm. The level of phosphorylation of specific cellular proteins were increased significantly by Ca<sup>2+</sup>/calmodulin-dependent protein kinase II (CaMKKI/CaMKKII) activity in rat liver, whereas in the peripheral blood leukocytes the level of phosphorylation of these proteins were increased after Ca<sup>2+</sup>/calmodulin-dependent protein kinase IV (CaMKKIV) activation. The data show that CaMKK is localized in nucleus and functions in gene expression and in signal transduction in rat liver.
