Listen to this story: Call it the art of baking, or the creative side of the kitchen, but chefs can be as much artists as they are cooks. Laura Burroughs is both. In the kitchen, she bakes chocolate chip cookies with fluffy, melt-in-your-mouth texture. She cooks salmon with crushed peas and a delicate touch of fresh lemon, and she stuffs roasted beef tenderloin with a walnut and endive stuffing. Outside the kitchen, she draws with pencil, paint and watercolors. When her co-workers saw what she was doing they suggested she create a line of cookies for her bakery, Lucky on St. Armands Circle. "I can be very stubborn and hardheaded and not willing to give up," Burroughs said. But she's a team player. She saw the potential in the cookie line and agreed to bring it to life. The cookies are baked to order. Customers can choose from three flavors: original, white chocolate and chocolate chip. They also can add sprinkles, or "sugar points." Laura Burroughs of Lucky Bakes cookies for a Lucky on St. Armands Circle market. The kitchen is near the front of the store, near the shelves of frozen food, canned goods and the dairy case. It's an area she calls her "dream kitchen." Burroughs owns Lucky Bakes, a bakery that specializes in cookies. The store is a decade old and on St. Armands Circle. 2d92ce491b
