

KEYMACRO is a program that allows the user to record macros of the user's keyboard strokes, then repeat those macros with a single keypress. The program allows the user to record macros of the user's keyboard strokes, then repeat those macros with a single keypress. The process is very easy, in the setup menu, users are prompted to create a macro key press sequence, and then they can play or record that sequence. The user can program which keys they wish to use to perform the desired sequence. When the sequence is complete, users can save their macro to a file, or place their macro into memory. Each macro can also be placed into a folder that can be used to record macros for other keys, or similar ones. Each macro can be played and recorded using the software or the user can use their own recording software, for example, Avisynth. The macros can be paused while being recorded, edited and replayed. KeyMACRO also allows the user to create macro keys sequences that can be automatically recorded by the user. For example, a user can create a macro that opens a desired file, then another macro that checks the file's size. If the file's size is greater than a certain value, the user will then be prompted to either send the file to a remote server or open the file locally. The user can also create macros with multiple keys in them. For example, the user can create a macro that opens a program, selects a file, then a filter, then creates a new folder. It can be a very handy utility for users who travel a lot, and this program can be very useful to them. The program is not limited to use with computers only, it can be used with tablets, smartphones and other mobile devices, and can be integrated into software in a similar way. It can work with programs such as Notepad, Photoshop, iTunes, etc. The application is available in two versions, a basic version that is completely free, and a premium version, that adds features such as the ability to save macros, themes, bookmarks, templates, etc. The Basic version of the application is a program that allows the user to record macros of the user's keyboard strokes, then repeat those macros with a single keypress. Excel TV Excel TV is a spreadsheet program for the computer and on-screen TV. It is used for creating spreadsheets and presentations for educational and commercial use. A spreadsheet is a simple data-entry and calculation tool. Instead of typing data, information or calculations into a separate formula (worksheet) as is done in a text-based spreadsheet, Excel provides a way of expressing a calculation in a spreadsheet, allowing input and output data to be freely mixed in one central place. Thus, data can be moved from one calculation to another. Data Analyst The next version of Datawindows is Data Analyst (3.1), an application that is used for in-depth data exploration. This utility provides you all kinds of data analysis tools, such as stats and charts to help you better understand your data.
