It's never a good idea to let a lender set the terms. "When you sign a loan contract, you give up many of your rights," says Robert Kiyosaki. "Most of the time, the contracts are drawn up without your input. And your term is usually set for a long period of time (15, 30, 60 years)." His advice: "You need to sit down with a loan representative and negotiate. Your terms should include lower interest rates and shorter terms. If you want a lower interest rate, you need to negotiate."
