portability of apps can be seen as a good thing because a user could do his/her work with ease on his/her device of choice.

However, developers need to make sure the app runs without problems on any given platform. This is why their developers make apps with lower hardware requirements. Today, we take a look at an app that can work on any operating system and any hardware, with very few issues. We will call it a universal app because it is able to function without a problem on a given platform, no matter the number of tasks you use it for. This cross-platform app is HomeGlance by Mirametrix. It comes with a clean and very user-friendly interface, with some pretty cool features. This productivity suite is for people who want to keep their homes in order without getting overwhelmed by the many chores that can come with such an undertaking. The interface is extremely easy to use. It takes some time to get accustomed to but once you've mastered it, you'll wonder how you ever got by without such a tool. HomeGlance by Mirametrix has a number of different tools, each assigned to a specific task. The WorkBar is one of them. The WorkBar will tell you about the weather in your area, the traffic on the roads leading to your home, and a whole lot more. It has a built-in calendar and alarm and can also be used as a stopwatch. The Viewer will tell you if any of your loved ones or family members are near your house, and lets you check on the current temperature at your home. All of this information can be seen through a very easy-to-use interface. The cool thing about the app is that you can set up a number of alerts to let you know when something dangerous is happening at home, and the Viewer is a useful tool to do just that.

---

---

---

---

---

What's New in the?

Glance is an application with quite an interesting interface. The user is first led through a clean and easy-to-use interface. He or she is provided with all sorts of information in a calm, structured way. The glazers are then given a number of functions to perform, which is quite convenient. Thus, the user is freed from any sort of monotony. Being a programmer myself, I had to first make sure that all the ideas that went into the application were solid.

---

Everything was tested before the official release.

Main features:

- eye detection: Glance can detect if the user is either looking down at his computer, or even right at it.
- windows snap: The user can easily move a window to the other monitor
- privacy guard:

Glance analyzes what the user is doing and warns him if his privacy is being invaded - alert: Glance can alert the user to take a break from work - step alert: Glance can alert the user to step away from his computer for a break - 20:20:20 rule: The user can work for 20 minutes

---

without a break, the warning is issued after 20 minutes have passed. - smart pointer: Glance can easily detect where the mouse cursor is so the user can move it between monitors - open : Glance checks if the window is open to ensure that the user can only be distracted

by looking into the open window - data protection: Glance can protect the user from prying eyes - presence: Glance can detect if there is extra presence in the background - check anti-virus: Glance can check if there is any malicious program running on the user's computer Glance does have quite a few functions. These will become better as the Visualizer progresses.

---

What's good: - all the screens are well organized
- each function has an easy to remember name - the interface is quite easy to navigate What's bad: -

---

no real tutorials

Recommendation: This is a very good application.

Anyone with eyes can easily use this. Glance works in a way that is very similar to other applications. It monitors the user's actions and warns them when they're not as productive as they are. Glance works through the integration of Windows and the Visualizer core. The core has a number of characteristics that make this application worth a look. The program constantly monitors the user and offers him help and guidance. This is a very useful application.
