I am releasing this for free. I hope you like it. If you have any problem with the installation or anything else, don't hesitate to contact me. You can do it at the same page of this blog. I just released the 2.0 of the same, so you can update to the newest version of My Desktop Themes without any problem. Update button is on the right side of the page. The new version has some improvements: - bug fixes - new skins and sounds - new skins for the right side window and Favorites - new option for the "Desktop Vista" theme - new option for the desktop translation "My Desktop Themes" will be completely free. If you like it and want to support me. Go to www.littlewebsite.com/support, make a donation of 1 Euro and I will give you a special download code to download the next version. There's one little problem with the new version. If you try to open the installer file, you will get a message: "Bluespot: Security warning: The installer file could be infected. Disable the IE SmartScreen Filter to proceed." I tried and failed to find out the reason, but I think you need to update your internet security program, if you have one, to the latest version.

I have created a package for my app. I am currently hosting it on NPM (I installed and configured this package on my app, but I cannot for the life of me figure out how to link to this package with the correct reference. Because I am creating my own package.json, I do not have a name, description, etc. I also do not see a way to do this from my NPM package's repository page (How do I link to my package, and what information should I include on the NPM page? A: The url should look like this one: If you add your name, that's ok too. You can also use the short url which looks like this one: Meet the new entry-level iPad Apple's reinvention of the iPad is further along than many of us realize, with the company announcing on Thursday that it's releasing an entry-level iPad at the end of this year. The device, which will be sold for $499 and come without cellular connectivity, the only things missing will be a SIM card and the ability to run wireless networking, if you want to connect it to a Wi-Fi network. Aside from the obvious financial hurdle of $499, this also means that Apple is continuing to release different iPad models. It's now available to buy through Apple retail stores, but it will also be available for purchase online, through US carrier AT&T, and of course at carriers like the post-paid carriers Air Voice and Tru Wireless. If you plan on buying this device, there are a few things that you'll need to know. The device will
