I have an ideal setup for a 'day' view, but am unsure how to proceed to handle 'weekly' and 'monthly' views. I understand that I could have multiple template files, or have a particular template file serve as an overview view, but it is currently a one day view of appointments. I also want to hide 'week' and 'month' views of appointments, only showing the 'day' view. When a user logs in, I intend to publish a user's appointment info to the client, but the client can view a 'day', 'week' or 'month'. If I publish the whole document, it makes sense to put the 'day' view template first. If I publish only a subset of the document, I don't want to fill in the whole document. If I publish only a view of an entry for a user, it makes sense to put the view first. Does this make sense? A: All this would look like: Views Appointments Appointments.WeekViews Appoint
