The Astros, Olney reports, are looking to trade for someone "who can really help them win in 2019." This trade would allow the Astros to cash in on the recently declining Mets, and also provide them with the opportunity to pair Cano with Jose Altuve, who was recently acquired by the Astros from the Tampa Bay Rays. Cano would fit that bill, Olney notes. According to Olney, the Mets aren't interested in dealing Cano, despite the declining costs of starting pitching and a need for left-handed hitting. The present invention relates to a family of so-called "A1" type acid phosphoric esters, which are useful as stabilizers for organic material. The present invention also relates to a process for the production of such esters. It is known that acid phosphoric esters, when used in relatively small quantities as stabilizers for organic materials, have the ability to prevent or inhibit various undesirable reactions in the material, such as oxidation and thermal decomposition. Among the compounds having such stabilizing properties, the most valuable are those acid phosphoric esters having the highest degree of activity. Such esters, with suitable substituents, may be called the "A1" type acid phosphoric esters. In the art of producing the acid phosphoric esters, a number of processes have been proposed, and in particular, the acid phosphoric esters having an A1 type structure have been produced in the presence of acid catalysts (J. Am. Chem. Soc. 78 (1956), 5866-5873). In these known processes, an A1 type acid phosphoric ester is produced by the action of a phosphoric acid, a phosphorous pentoxide, or a pentavalent phosphorus compound as the catalyst on an alkyl, alkenyl or alkynyl phosphonic ester having a carbon atom of at least 7, an alkyl group having at least 7 carbon atoms or a cycloalkyl group in the presence of an alcohol. Also, the acid phosphoric esters of the A1 type are produced by the action of an acid catalyst on the ester of alkyl or alkenyl phosphonic acids, which are obtained by the reaction of a 54884cb42d
