It is free for web service. 6 of 6 The job of high-priced free-agent defensive tackle is tougher than you think. Listed at 6-foot-4 and 353 pounds, Peko is a beast with a big, strong frame and a big, strong sack number. That's all you really need. He can get off the ball and win battles, as he's shown in the past with his ability to get push at the second level and against the run. Peko will have a shot at a starting job on the Ravens' defensive line, despite missing the offseason program with a hamstring injury. It's all up to what Peko can bring to the table in the preseason, but he's the only known 'backer on the roster who can claim he's a legitimate starting nose tackle. Second-year player Daryl Smith is also battling for a spot at the position, as he can play every position along the line. Smith is a better athlete, but Peko has more experience at the position. If Peko and Smith both win jobs, the Ravens have to be happy with the depth they have at nose tackle. As it stands now, the Ravens have one of the best groups of defensive tackles in the league, with Haloti Ngata at nose tackle, Terrence Cody at the three-technique and Tony McDaniel at the five-technique. At 340 pounds, Peko will likely eat into the bottom of the rotation, but he has the ability to eat into Ngata's playing time with his ability to get push at the second level and win battles.Q: using find() in python to find first instance of specific entry my code is below and my issue is I am trying to use find() but it doesn't seem to work. the idea is when i loop through the content of the xml file to grab the ID and get data from that specific ID. I have the content working, and i know I can only pull data from the FIRST instance of that ID but not any subsequent ones. Any suggestions? def __init__(self):

root = ET.parse(xmlpath)
root.getroot().tag
