In This Chapter Viewing and gathering images for editing Getting familiar with Adobe's Elements software Understanding the lay of the land in Elements A _Photo Editor_, _Photo Editor Pro_, and _Photoshop Elements_ are three different ways to edit photos. Each editor offers a different kind of editing and offers a different set of features. In this chapter, I introduce each editor — and highlight the editor's differences — to give you a better idea of which is right for you. I also show you how to capture and edit images, plus organize, catalog, and edit them, in the right order. (I use the term "editing" to include what you do after you capture an image.) I start by talking about how to approach images in general; then I get into all the great goodies that Elements can do. I discuss how to get the most out of your editor and discuss how to organize your photos in _layers._ Finally, I teach you how to transfer images to the computer and how to import and share online. I'm not going to go into extremely fine details of each editor in this chapter, but I tell you a lot about the top features that each program offers and go over the general steps necessary to complete a project in your chosen program. I cover these basics as simply and as thoroughly as I can. The only way to get the most out of these programs is by using them; therefore, I urge you to jump in and start creating with Elements. ## Gathering the Images You Need Before you edit a photo, you need to know what you're looking for — and you need to know the details about a photograph. Before you start editing a shot, make sure you've gathered all the appropriate information. This chapter assumes that you'll be working from scratch with a new image. If, however, you're using a photo that someone else shot and

Q: How to set value in spinner that is being created dynamically? I am trying to create spinner dynamically using reflection as shown in the below code: DataTable myTable = null; ArrayList tempArrayList = new ArrayList(); // some code // some code DataSet items = myTable.DataSet; for(DataRow row : myTable.Rows) { ListData rowItem = new ListData(); // some code // some code rowItem.setRow(row); tempArrayList.add(rowItem); } List listItems = tempArrayList.stream().map(x -> { try { Field f = x.getClass().getDeclaredField("spinners"); f.setAccessible(true); //return Json.toJson(f); Spinner spin = (Spinner)f.get(x); String[] values = (String[])spin.getSelectedItem().toArray(); for (String v : values) { Log.i("Found value: ", v); } return values; } catch (Exception e) { return null; } }).collect(Collectors.toList()); List listItems = Arrays.asList(listItems); But the problem is that the values in spinners are set to the default value -1. I've tried doing Json.toJson(f) but it only returns the object itself and not the values. Please let me know how to set the values to spinner. Thanks in advance. A: I am using the code below, and the values get set to the selected values in the spinner try { Field f = x.getClass().get

Inguinal hernia, rather than coronary artery disease, is associated with prognosis in patients hospitalized with acute myocardial infarction. The relationship between inguinal hernia and prognosis in patients with acute myocardial infarction (AMI) is unclear. The aim of the present study was to investigate whether inguinal hernia is a prognostic factor in patients with AMI. A total of 2588 patients admitted to the AMI inpatient ward of Fujita Health University hospital in 2007-2012 were studied. Their median follow-up period was 5.3 years. Inguinal hernia was noted on admission or operation within 1 year. The associations of inguinal hernia with major adverse cardiac event (MACE, the primary endpoint, defined as all-cause death, nonfatal AMI, coronary revascularization, or hospitalization for heart failure) and stroke were investigated using the Cox proportional hazards model. A total of 1159 patients were included in the MACE-free survival analysis. The crude incidence of MACE was 3.9%. The incidence of MACE was higher in patients with inguinal hernia (6.7%) than in those without (3.1%; hazard ratio [HR], 1.59; 95% confidence interval [CI], 1.09-2.31; P=0.017). The incidence of MACE was higher in patients with previous inguinal hernia surgery (5.7%) than in those without (4.1%; HR, 1.47; 95% CI, 1.02-2.12; P=0.041). The incidence of MACE in patients with preoperative sciatica was also higher (5.0%) than that in those without (3.9%; HR, 1.64; 95% CI, 0.93-2.87; P=0.087). Multivariate analysis revealed that patients with inguinal hernia, those with previous inguinal hernia surgery, those with preoperative sciatica, and those with low high-density lipoprotein cholesterol levels were significantly more likely to experience MACE. Compared with patients without inguinal hernia, those with inguinal hernia were more likely to experience MACE. Although the reason for the increase in MACE is unclear, inguinal hernia may be a potential marker for poor prognosis.ARAC Application ARAC Application Apply for a disability
