Circumcaval ureteral obstruction is a rare cause of severe acute renal failure in children. The available data on management of this condition are scant. We report our experience with children presenting with circumcaval ureteral obstruction. Data of all the patients who underwent surgical management of this condition between 1990 and 2001 were retrieved. Surgical management consisted of ureteroneocystostomy in those with incomplete renal function on the preoperative scan and ureteropyelostomy in those with complete renal function. Six children presented with acute renal failure secondary to circumnavigated ureteral obstruction (hematuria in three, hydronephrosis in three, and pain in five). The median (range) age was 3.2 (1.
