History Photoshop was originally developed by John Knoll at Adobe Systems, and was initially developed as a direct competitor to Adobe's fledgling page layout software, Macromedia Freehand. Adobe released Photoshop as a separate program in 1992, with the ability to edit images directly and for professional photographers to work with RAW images. When it was first released, Photoshop cost $60, but was written entirely in PostScript, an early vector-based scripting language. Its early users were mostly photographers interested in the functionality that Photoshop offered rather than the price. John Knoll developed Photoshop in his spare time to help him and his wife afford a house. Knoll approached Bill Gates, who owned a Computerland store near where he lived, in late 1992, telling him that if he could make it free he could turn Photoshop into a household name. Windows and Office came in their current versions and the first version was released as freeware on November 19, 1993. The first version of Photoshop was purely for image editing in 1992. The first version of Photoshop included a few basic features like the ability to create layers and masks. Originally, the photoshop team only had Microsoft Word (prograsm?!) and PowerPoint (!) to create the icons for the program. They'd have to actually count their pixels. They switched to using Photoshop to do the icons and there was no Photoshop icon or icon set used until the release of version 5. Source: The concept of Photoshop came from an entire group of talented young artists and engineers that aimed to make the best image editing software with no price tag and with the ability to handle RAW images. They didn't want to clutter the menus with buttons like other image editing software did and they wanted to make the program easy to use. The second photo shows the first Photoshop screen with the available tools. Source: Computers were slow back then, and it was initially difficult to handle a real-time photo editing program. The user interface was limited and not very well organized, and there was no way to add a layer right next to the image you were editing. The third photo shows the

◆[a]lthough defendant's statements were not 'made' until after defendant had driven the work vehicle approximately 20 yards, there was no substantial period of time between defendant's instructions to Ms. J.S. and his vehicular maneuver." (Emphasis added). We conclude that BMR failed to preserve the issue of whether the out- of-court statements were "made during the course of a conspiracy" because BMR did not apprise the trial court of the legal ground upon which it bases its argument. In fact, BMR's appellate argument does not even appear to directly challenge the trial court's initial conclusion that the statements were - 13 - J-S06002-15 made during the course of the conspiracy. Rather, BMR's argument is directed at the trial court's erroneous determination that the statements were made before the creation of the conspiracy. Therefore, we conclude that this claim has not been preserved for appellate review. In the alternative, we decline to address this issue because we agree with the Commonwealth that the trial court's finding that the conspiracy began before the statements was in error and was not supported by the evidence. BMR argues that once the conspiracy was complete the statements made in furtherance of the conspiracy were outside the co-conspirator exception to the hearsay rule. While BMR acknowledges that the statements were made while J.S. was actively working, BMR argues that the conspiracy had ended because J.S. had finished her task. In support of its argument, BMR cites to Mair, supra, 88 A.3d at 1029, wherein the Pennsylvania Supreme Court held that a single witness's testimony that his co-conspirator had killed the victim was inadmissible when it did not provide any evidence that the killing occurred during the course of the conspiracy.
