Not all features will work in a way that will be appropriate to you. Photoshop CS6 For most of my time with Photoshop, I used CS5, and I probably still have some CS5 programs around my computer. Most of the new features aren't as useful to me as they are to other people; they're more about additional tools for the actual design process. But the changes are substantial, and you may find some of the changes help your workflow. I'm going to concentrate on the differences, but I'm sure you can find some great resources with great CS6 tutorials, as well. Photoshop CS6 Features Even more than Photoshop CS5, CS6 offers much greater capabilities than previous versions. The following list contains features that I use the most, but you may find that you use features in other programs. The list includes many new features, as well as some that are now fully supported by Photoshop:

Content-Aware Fill: This feature makes your images look like they were taken by a camera that automatically fills in background areas by using the regions of the image that match the colors in the new background.

Magic Wand: The most powerful tool in Photoshop. This wand selects the objects that are the best match for the color of the brush. The end result is more natural and realistic than the old manual selection tools. You can customize and save different versions of this tool. For example, you can choose the threshold of the selection.

New levels: This tool lets you create a photorealistic rendering that can be saved as a flattened (as shown in Figure 7-16). It's like a hair stylist's razor, without the pain. The tool paints detail onto the flattened image as levels are applied. Figure 7-16: Photoshop CS6 new levels.

Non-destructive layer editing: If you go to the Layers panel, you can now choose to edit the layers without eliminating the pixels. See Figure 7-17. (c) 2011 by Keeri Grace. Figure 7-17: Nondestructive editing means that you can edit each layer individually. If you like a blur effect, try creating a Gaussian Blur without actually erasing the pixels. (See Figure 7-18.) Figure 7-18: Creating a Gaussian Blur is now a nondestructive process. Smart

Well, that's where the world's most popular national parks come in. Brazil is home to 15% of the world's tropical rainforests and provides a huge variety of habitats and a substantial number of endemic species. This would be a great region for birders to visit, which is why we've selected two of the region's most popular parks, the Reserva Biológ

What's New in the?

Three minutes left and the Carkeek Park officials are "almost" ready to jump on the board and declare that the ice hockey game between the Ottawa Jr. Senators and the Cornwall Junior Chippewas on Friday night has ended. With some seconds on the clock remaining in a deadlocked 4-4 tie, the Carkeek Park officials believe the game is now officially over and Cornwall has won the game 5-4 in a shoot-out. Then, the clock ticks past three minutes and the officials think they have the puck secured at the one-minute mark. There's only about eight seconds left and after a few more seconds the officials jump on the board and declare the game to be over. Five seconds on the clock and the officials jump on the board for sure this one is finished. But a minute and a half later, the game is not over. The puck is in play, but Carkeek Park is not ready to call it at the 45-second mark. The game can be a tie game or it can be a hockey game with five or six shots into the net. Q: Raspberry PI not changing Power and Charging Time on Battery I installed a led on my PC via an adapter (power bank) on the Raspberry PI and it works great. When I plug the Raspberry Pi in, the led changes color. When I unplug the USB cable and run it on a battery for 3 hours, it will turn green again. When I unplug the battery and put it on the power rail, the led doesn't change color. Is there something else I need to do? A: You need to enable charging on the USB pin that is powering the Pi when you're on battery power only. Open up /boot/config.txt in a text editor and add a line to the end of the file: dtoverlay=pi3-usb-charger Reboot, your Pi will charge when on a battery only, and can be powered directly from the USB port when not. Also see: You can also use a powered hub if you're worried about using a USB power delivery feature to power the Pi, but you have to use a powered hub that has an
