Looking at an AC power supply to replace a broken one for my new computer. They have two different voltage ranges that show as AC and DC. I see a QuickPitch data logger that uses a dc voltage of 4 volts and it has a 1.8-2.0 amp current draw. Are there any issues if I use this? A: QuickPitch is rated for 2.0A at 40Hz, so it is designed for medium and high frequency use. AC power at 50Hz or 60Hz will not provide this type of current. Using this with a computer power supply will be like using a flashlight to light a dark room. Use this sort of thing for when you want to measure something on a long term basis. You can get battery-operated ones, but then you will need to be careful of battery life. /* * fscrypto.h -- * Copyright (C) 2012, 2014 Intel Corp. * Author: Shengzhan Zhang * * This program is free software; you can redistribute it and 595f342e71
