In addition to "HyperMotion Technology," new player animations, the ball physics, and the player animations have been updated for FIFA 22. You can see the new player animations in the video below, but for those who are interested in the details, they've been listed below in bullet points. "HyperMotion Technology" : On-ball actions and player animations have been updated for FIFA 22. Player animations are on-the-fly generated as the players take on a position to perform a new physical action. Players will physically achieve the new physical action, and are then animated doing the new animation that the player has acquired. : On-ball actions and player animations have been updated for FIFA 22. Players now look and move according to their physical shape and position. Player Size: Player size has been updated for FIFA 22. The relative size of player will change according to their position on the pitch. FIFA 22 introduces "HyperMotion Technology", which captures on-the-fly generated player animations for players. A player will go from one position to another position and an animator will generate the animation to move from one position to another. Players will physically achieve the new physical action, and are then animated doing the new animation that the player has acquired. Visuals : Players now also appear to move like they would in life. Characters move with a walk and run effect based on their physical attributes. Similarly, players also have a physical, on-the-fly animation for switching foot position, such as a foot swap. : Players now also appear to move like they would in life. A life in football Play the game for free whenever, wherever with this free version of EA SPORTS FIFA 20. FIFA is more than a sports game. It's a lifestyle. The first football game back in its early days of arcade gaming was a simple game of who could kick the ball the furthest. The fact that it's still going shows how truly amazing the game has been throughout the years. In the arcades of the 1980s, EA Sports FIFA was the favourite and the games on their own were the attraction. From those early days to modern day, FIFA is still the heart and soul of football, and it's never looked back. It's been the best selling videogame franchise for 16 years running. The basics Take your place on the field with 50 authentic teams and 8,000 real-life players. FIFA 20 features football's most authentic and complete gameplay ever. Now it's so easy to drop-in and play anytime and anywhere, with no need for an internet connection or special hardware. The new passing system makes everything feel more fluid, realistic and enjoyable. The engine has been fine-tuned to offer a better feel and better balance, and the new ball physics are perfect. The graphics and match presentation have been carefully fine-tuned to replicate the experience of watching the actual 2018 FIFA World Cup™. For anyone wanting to create their own stadium or replay their favourite team in action, FIFA 20 comes with the new Create A Stadium tool that's as simple as drag and drop. Players can be added anywhere on the pitch, including goalkeepers and artificial intelligence assistants to create a world-class stadium. bc9d6d6daa
