1. Choose File > New. 2. Choose any type of file (.psd) from the drop-down menu. Photoshop chooses the Windows format you indicate in the drop-down menu. If you create a Portable Document Format (PDF) file, you need to save it as a file type other than .psd first, as explained in the next step. 3. Save the file in Photoshop in a location you designate. Make sure the file type is set to Photoshop (JPG) or Photoshop (RAW) in the drop-down menu at the bottom of the dialog box. 4. Select the proper Create a Camera Raw File (CR2) option from the File Format drop-down menu. This option is meaningful only if you're using Photoshop for either cataloging images or editing or adjusting images that were shot on a digital camera. 5. Click OK. 6. Edit your file and begin experimenting. Photoshop has both a standard and a Curves/Exposure panel. You can use these to do any adjustment you like, as discussed in the section "Editing images in Photoshop." 7. Adjust to your liking. 8. Save your changes. Adjusting an image in Photoshop is discussed in Chapter 10. If you can't save your work to a PSD file format, don't worry. Photoshop has an easy way for you to create an image file other than PSD format. Choose File > Create > New, and then choose any image format you like. ## Making the Photo Editable Editing a photo with Photoshop is much easier than first entering it. You can zoom in and out of a picture, crop and resize it, and even add special effects to it. It's often easier to make a change using a photo editor than in Photoshop. The earlier section "Creating an image file in Photoshop" provides instructions for saving an image in a Photoshop file type. After you've done that, you have the option of saving the file to a format that's accessible by other programs, such as Adobe's own software and other photo-editing programs, including Apple's own.

Q: How to determine the size of a.cshtml file I'm still a C# web developer, new to ASP.NET MVC. I'm creating a web application for the first time and have gotten myself into a bit of trouble, but hopefully not too deep. I'm creating a view with razor syntax, but when I run it in design view it is creating about 500kb worth of files, I know this because as soon as I try to open it the files are full of "Page Load Error" messages. I've scoured online and found nothing that explains why

The invention relates to the armature and commutator structure of a dynamoelectric machine, such as an electric motor, generator, or the like. The armature structure of the invention includes an armature subassembly having end rings, and a voltage sine-cosine winding. The armature subassembly is demountably mounted to an armature unit for access during servicing. It is important that the armature of an electric machine be of a sturdy construction so that it withstands the rigors and abuse imposed by its use in the environment to which it is exposed. The armature should be able to withstand centrifugal force and stresses generated by the torque loads imposed during the operation of the electric machine. Since the armature voltage windings are used to supply power to the armature commutator, care must be exercised to ensure that no damage be done to the windings in the event of a short circuit. The armature winding is generally wound by a hand process and requires painstakingly small "hand" wires, e.g., about 0.020 inches in diameter. Besides the stresses imposed by the winding process, the winding must be kept clean of spurious matter which might insulate the windings and create a short circuit. The maintenance of a clean winding is not only a nuisance, but results in a loss of machine time. It has also been a practice to construct the armature subassembly of stamped or fabricated metal parts. Such parts are relatively easily repairable and replaceable in the event of any defect in the part, but the cost of these parts is high. In addition, it is important that the armature structure be assembled quickly and in a reliable manner so that the electric machine is in operation as soon as possible. WASHINGTON, Jan. 14 (UPI) -- Ron Paul, the libertarian, is a loud critic of U.S. involvement in wars. He hasn't been featured as prominently as he might have in the current race to the GOP nomination. But if the run-off between Mitt Romney and Rick Santorum is to be avoided, Paul is probably the strongest of the GOP anti-war contenders. He also has been the longest-serving member of the U.S. House of Representatives in history. The 10th congressional district in the city of Portland in Oregon, Paul represents the northern part of the state and is known for his anti-war views. He's best-known as the Libertarian Party candidate for president in 1988, when he
