Q: Selecting a column from an index with another column For a specific table I have the following index: CREATE INDEX `index` ON `table` (`id` ASC) The table has a column named `source`:

source	id	print	1	ipad	2	desktop	3	mobile	4	tablet	5	others	6
--------	----	-------	---	------	---	---------	---	--------	---	--------	---	--------	---

I want to select all rows from the table that have a specific source. Since I already have an index for id, is it faster to select all rows and filter them with an IN statement (eg. SELECT * FROM table WHERE id IN (1, 2, 3, 6)) or would it be faster to have a condition based on an index (eg. SELECT * FROM table WHERE id IN (SELECT id FROM index WHERE source = 'print'))?

A: An index on (source, id) will contain all combinations from (1, 1), (1, 2), (1, 3), (1, 6), (2, 1), (2, 3), (2, 6), (3, 1), (3, 6) and (6, 1), (6, 3), (6, 6). Only the first index term is used in a WHERE condition. If the second index is actually your problem, you could use this: CREATE INDEX index2 ON table (source = 'print'); Having such an index will make a search for all rows with a source of 'print' much much faster. If you actually had a problem with the actual id being used to select (you would use it in some dynamic SQL), you would have to create an index like this: CREATE INDEX index2 ON table (

LaFontaine, his longtime friend, said goodbye to Bossy in a telephone call and the new trio set out to make a run in the playoffs. More than a decade later, Bossy speaks of his time with the Islanders in the same tone he did while making that trade. "Everyone had a lot of confidence in LaFontaine," said Bossy, his smile that of a father leaning in to speak to his son. "What I loved is this guy came up and shook my hand and said, 'thanks a lot, we're really looking forward to working with you'." Bossy did his best to deliver on his promise. The new trio would go on to give the Islanders one of their best chances at advancing out of the first round that season, where they lost to the Ottawa Senators. Now, Bossy is still the Chief's ambassador, a Hall of Fame member and, although he no longer plays, carries the torch for a franchise that can no longer stand on its own. "It's going to be a tough hockey season," Bossy said, with a glint in his eye.
