The minimum requirements are as follows: You may as well skip the manual video removal and simply download the video at the source. Use a video editing tool like Adobe Premiere Pro, Avid or Microsoft Movie Maker. So, what is a video? A video is a sequence of frames that appear on your computer monitor. New digital video is composed of 1,200 to 1,449 pixels wide by 1,024 to 1,732 pixels high. That's not a number, but a range: 1,200 to 1,732. If you want to compare that to an older videotape, it has 4,500 horizontal lines of data, a resolution that was once sufficient. Now, because more and more information is packed into each frame, a decent video is more than three times the height of a standard TV signal, coming in at more than 4,500 horizontal lines of data. How do the pixels get so close together? It's quite a bit of work for the camera and the processor to make the video, but it's straightforward stuff. To store a scene, the camera captures it in tiny "pixels". To make a perfect video, it reads the pixels, combines them into frames, and writes it all out. It then "stacks" the frames together, and the whole thing appears on
