To enable any kind of non-SQL objects to be detected in AutoData, in this release of the Oracle Exadata System Software, we did not use the LDIF mechanism. Instead we opened the objects for detection and entered metadata, for example, for SmartPolicy classes, we entered the JAR file name. To avoid losing data, it is important to back up data in between the Write-Through cache mode changes. For Oracle Exadata System Software releases earlier than release 11.2.2, backup and restore the following file: /etc/oracle-as-setroot.properties To maintain database connections in the installed database software, there is no need to stop the Oracle Database service. For /opt/oracle/oraHome/diag, you must stop the Oracle Database service to perform a disk analyzer operation. # date; /bin/sh -c 'date' Resscan Software 3.14 Download Freel The operating system time is written to a time-stamped file. If you change the time while the system is powered on, the time written in the Oracle Exadata Storage Server database will be incorrect. If you want to change the time during the power-on command, specify the --no-prompt option, and specify a prompt to wait before a time is written. You can change the operating system time using the following Linux command: Executables for the r22 release can be downloaded for our 32-bit and 64-bit software for Red Hat Enterprise Linux 5.6, 6.0, and 7.0.
